

“This is what I know will happen once this is over.....

Your little ones will go back to school and hug their friends. You'll go back to the office and cry with people you barely noticed before. You'll happily wait an hour for a table at your favorite restaurant. You'll take your kids to a ballgame and buy extra hotdogs and soda. You'll go to a concert and dance like you did back in High School. You'll rush to the movies and order extra butter on your popcorn. You'll get in a plane and go visit family you hadn't realized you loved so much. And.... servers, stadium attendants, concession stand workers and flight attendants will give you the biggest smiles you have ever seen. And you will, in your own way, forever pay tribute to the doctors, nurses, and health care workers because they were the soldiers that protected us from this hideous enemy. Until then, be Patient... Be Strong... Be Safe.”

Ginny Wright. She is a caregiver for an elderly friend, Eddie, who requires weekly nurse visits. Ginny learned that one of these nurses, who tended to him 2 weeks ago, tested positive for the virus. They had been coming in with no protective equipment on. The CDC says you are clear after up to 3 weeks in isolation. They must stay in quarantine for the time being. As of today, neither of them are having symptoms. We will all pray that the situation and their home remain healthy.
